

I don't consider the broadcast of one-sided documentaries shortly before elections a service to the public interest. I hope the FCC will defend the public trust and oblige its licensees, including Sinclair Broadcasting, to both show balance and reflect local concerns.

Please strengthen media-ownership rules and the license-renewal process to protect our public assets, here the airwaves, from domination by private corporate owners. Imagine the Interior Department allowing [or even requiring] political billboards in national parks, and you may grasp the seriousness of my concern. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.
